The HGC Arbitrage Fund LP Class “F” units returned +1.52% in January vs +8.74% for the TSX Total Return.

The primary driver of performance in January was our SPAC portfolio. As we mentioned in the previous letter, the Fund was opportunistically adding to high conviction positions at attractive yields amid the market turmoil in December. While the overall SPAC book traded higher in January leading to broad gains, a good portion of the returns were from our position in Churchill Capital Corp (CCC.NYSE).

CCC IPO'd in early September raising $690 million, making it one of the largest IPO's of 2018. Led by Jerre Stead, the former CEO of IHS Markit (INFO.NSDQ), and Michael Klein of Klein and Company, CCC was formed to pursue a transaction in the information technology space. After just over four months, the team did exactly what they had set out to do by entering into a transaction with Clarivate Analytics, a 2016 carve out from Thompson Reuters (TRI.TSX) and current portfolio company of Onex. With a compelling valuation and strong management team anchored by Jerre Stead as Executive Chairman, CCC traded materially above the trust value, closing at $10.58 for month end providing a nice gain for the Fund.
